Ben Jonson (1572-1637)

- ❖ His Father died a month before his son's birth. Jonson's mother married a master bricklayer two years later.
- ❖ He Attained St Martin's Lane, Westminster School and University of Cambridge.
- ❖ Benjamin Jonson was an English playwright and poet,
- ❖ He was a classicist, a moralist, and a reformer of drama.
- ❖ In 1616 he received a yearly pension about £60 as England's first Poet Laureate.
- ❖ He maintained 'unities' of time, place and action in his plays.
- ❖ He served as a soldier in Flanders (Netherlands) and also worked as an actor protagonist "Hieronimo" (Geronimo) in the play The Spanish Tragedy , by Thomas Kyd and playwright with "Law Countries" in 1597.
- ❖ The identity of Jonson's wife has always been obscure, yet she sometimes is identified as "Ann Lewis",
- ❖ Imprisoned 3times for "The Isle of Dogs" (1597), He killed a fellow actor Gabriel Spenser in duel, his work with John Marston and George Chapman on Eastward Ho a 1605 play whose anti-Scottish sentiment briefly landed both Jonson and Chapman in jail. He quarreled with Inigo Jones, his stage designer and also quarreled with Marston and Dekker in 'War of the Theatres'.
- ❖ Every Man in His Humour made him a celebrity.

Ben Jonson (1572-1637)

- ❖ Sons of Ben or the "Tribe of Ben" - those younger poets such as Robert Herrick, Richard Lovelace, and Sir John Suckling who took their bearing in verse from Jonson.
- ❖ Arnold wrote a poem for him entitled "An Ode to Ben Jonson". It starts with—
"Ah Ben! Say how or when shall we thy guests meet at those lyric feasts made at the Sun, the dog, the triple tun?"
- ❖ The English Poets: Ben Jonson to Dryden by Arnold
- ❖ Alexander Pope said "He brought critical learning into vogue".
- ❖ Jonson in his Every Man out of His Humour (1599) described two kinds of humours— True Humour and Adopted Humour.
- ❖ Dryden called the later plays of Jonson as "Dotages" because they were not well received.
- ❖ Shakespeare was the Homer, or father of our dramatic poets; Jonson was the Virgil, the pattern of elaborate writing: I admire him, but I love Shakespeare." – An Essay of Dramatic Poesy.
- ❖ T.S. Elliot on Ben Jonson: "Jonson failed as a tragic dramatist."
 - Sejanus and Catiline, that largely failed to impress Renaissance audiences
- ❖ Epitaph on his tomb Westminster Abbey with epitaph "O rare Ben Jonson".
- ❖ Eastward Hoe and The Devil Is an Ass are for the most part city comedy,

- The Isle of Dogs, comedy (1597, with Thomas Nashe; lost)
- Every Man in His Humour, comedy (performed 1598; Pub 1601)
- Every Man out of His Humour, comedy (performed 1599; Pub 1600)
- Cynthia's Revels (performed 1600; Pub 1601)
- The Poetaster, comedy (performed 1601; Pub 1602)
- Sejanus His Fall, tragedy (performed 1603; Pub 1605)
- Eastward Ho, comedy (1605), a collaboration with John Marston and George Chapman
- Volpone, comedy (1605–06; Pub 1607)
- Epicoene, or the Silent Woman, comedy (performed 1609; Pub 1616)
- The Alchemist, comedy (performed 1610; Pub 1612)
- Catiline His Conspiracy, tragedy (performed and Pub 1611)
- Bartholomew Fair, comedy (performed 1614; Pub 1631)
- The Devil is an Ass, comedy (performed 1616; Pub 1631)
- A Tale of a Tub, comedy (performed 1633; Pub 1640)

Important Works of Ben Jonson

1. Every Man in His Humour (1598)
2. Every Man out of His Humour (1599)
3. Cynthia Revels (1600)
4. The Poetaster (1601)
5. A Full of Vivacity and Fun
6. Volpone: The Fox (1605)
7. Epicene or The Silent Woman (1609)
8. The Alchemist (1610)
9. Bartholomew Fair

10. Less Powerful
11. The Devil is an Ass
12. The Staple of Knews
13. The Tale of a Tub
14. Catiline His Conspiracy – Tragedy
15. Sejanus His Fall – Tragedy
16. Eastward Ho (along with Marston and Chapman)
17. The Poetaster
18. Song to Celia
19. The Magnetic Lad

The Poetaster (1601)- It is widely accepted among scholars and critics that the character of Horace in Poetaster represents Jonson himself, while Crispinus, who vomits up a pretentious and bombastic vocabulary, is Marston, and Demetrius Fannius is Dekker.

Major Work by Ben Jonson

Volpone; The Silent Woman; The Alchemist; and Bartholomew Fair. Two other important comedies of his, which illustrate his theory of 'humour' are—Every Man in His Humour and Every Man Out of Humour. The Alchemist, which is the most perfect in structure, is also the most brilliant realistic Elizabethan comedy. Volpone is a satirical study of avarice on the heroic scale. Bartholomew Fair presents a true picture of Elizabethan 'low life'. The Silent Woman, which is written in a lighter mood, approaches the comedy of manners. Ben Jonson wrote two tragic plays. Sejanus and Cataline on the classical model, but they were not successful

Comedy of Humours
1. Blood or Sanguine (sociable and pleasure seeking)
2. Phlegm (relaxed and quiet)
3. Choler or Yellow Bile (ambitious and leader like)
4. Melancholy or Black Bile (introverted and thoughtful)

Comedy of humours, a dramatic genre most closely associated with the English playwright Ben Jonson from the late 16th century. The term derives from the Latin humor (more properly umor), meaning “liquid,” and its use in the medieval and Renaissance medical theory that the human body held a balance of four liquids, or humours: a person had a healthy mind and body when their humours were balanced.

Phlegm makes one excessively calm and docile.

Choler or Yellow bile makes one highly ill-tempered.

Black Bile or Melancholy makes one excessively melancholy.

Blood was associated with a sanguine disposition, such as being overly optimistic and very social.

In Jonson’s Every Man in His Humour (acted 1598), which made this type of play popular, all the words and acts of Kiteley are controlled by an overpowering suspicion that his wife is unfaithful;

The comedy of humours

The comedy of humours focuses on a character or range of characters, each of whom exhibits two or more overriding traits or 'humours' that dominates their personality, desires and conduct.

This comic technique may be found in Aristophanes, but the English playwrights Ben Jonson and George Chapman popularized the genre in the closing years of the sixteenth century. In the later half of the seventeenth century, it was combined with the comedy of manners in Restoration comedy.

AKSRajveer

The four 'humours' or temperaments (Clockwise from top right; choleric; melancholic; sanguine; phlegmatic).

In Jonson's Every Man in His Humour (acted 1598), which made this type of play popular, all the words and acts of Kiteley are controlled by an overpowering suspicion that his wife is unfaithful; George Downright, a country squire, must be "frank" above all things; the country gull in town determines his every decision by his desire to "catch on" to the manners of the city gallant.

The comedy of humours

In his Introduction to Every Man out of His Humour (1599) Jonson explains his character-formula thus:

Some one peculiar quality

Doth so possess a man, that it doth draw

All his affects, his spirits, and his powers,

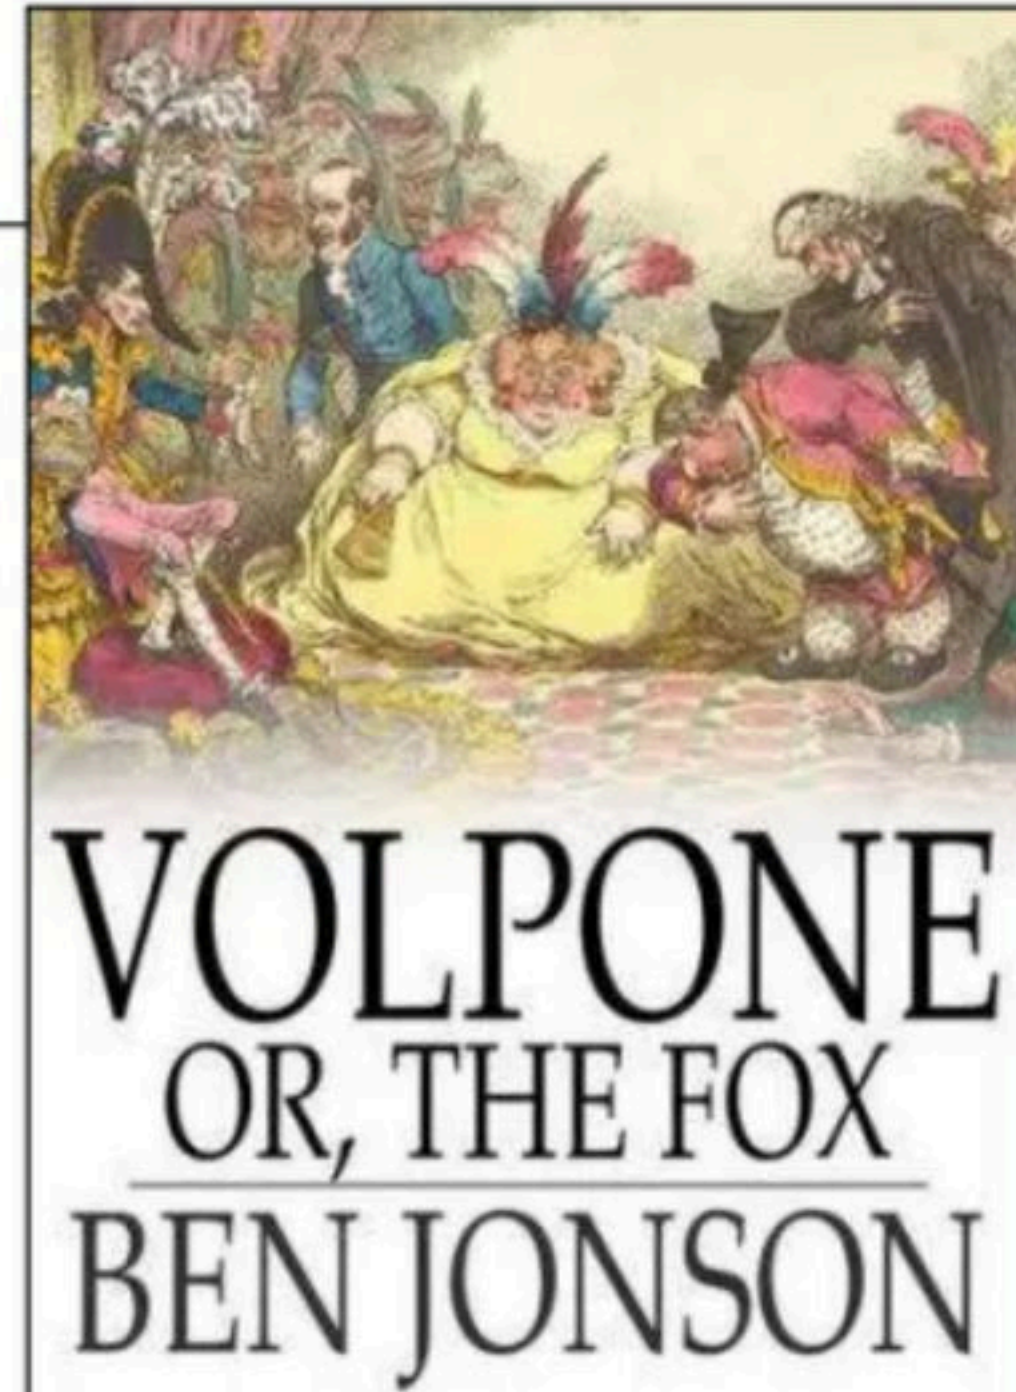

In their confluxions, all to run one way.

The comedy of humours owes something to earlier vernacular comedy but more to a desire to imitate the classical comedy of Plautus and Terence and to combat the vogue of romantic comedy, as developed by William Shakespeare. The satiric purpose of the comedy of humours and its realistic method lead to more serious character studies with Jonson's The Alchemist. The humours each had been associated with physical and mental characteristics; the result was a system that was quite subtle in its capacity for describing types of personality.
